MY BUSINESS

IN ADDITION TO BEING THE OWNER OF BUTTON BABY, ANDREA EGAN IS A MOTHER TO MADELINE, SIX, AND DECLAN, THREE, AND IS EXPECTING HER THIRD CHILD. After 11 years in the fashion industry in Melbourne, Vic, Andrea decided to give away her career to start a family. 'I wanted to be a stay-at-home mum and enjoy my kids while they were young,' she says. 'But when I was pregnant with our second child, I started to think of ways that I could also get satisfaction from a business.' It was in June 2009 that the Button Baby range of baby knits was born.

Andrea's aim is to offer customers a boutique experience online. She does this by only stocking selected pieces and making her site easy to navigate. 'I only sell products that I would use myself with my own children,' she says.

Helping others is something Andrea enjoys most about her business. 'I love connecting with my customers,' she says. 'There is nothing better than receiving an email from a happy mum who loves the product she received, perhaps because it helped her bub sleep or made a trip to the shops easier.'

This busy mother runs most of the business herself, but she also employs other talented mums. 'Since starting Button Baby I have become aware of how many clever mums there are out there,' she says. 'When we need things done that are beyond me and my husband, we love to support women who create, design, invent and use their skills and talents to develop a career alongside running a family and a house.'

Andrea's advice for other potential business owners is to think through all the pros and cons involved in running your own venture and how it will affect your family. 'Needless to say, having your own business is a lot of hard work... more hours than you can ever imagine! So you need to be truly passionate about your idea or your energy will run out.'
